Least likely to succeed—as a tourist area—might be the snap judgment applied to Northeast Arkansas. But the record continues to show that nothing could be farther from the truth. The transformation taking place at Blanchard Springs where an energetic Mounin View Lions Club is changing plain, rural scenery hto "The Land of the Cross-Bow" (1) is one example of the imagination and drive behind the planning in this section. The cabins and other attractions being created at Hardy, close by the Missouri border is attracting folks from as far away as Tennessee to this newest Arkansas resort. Inland deep sea fishing for alligator gar. (2) is awakening the sleepy lower White and St. Francis River delta areas to an awareness of aniattraction which could lure thousands of adven-ture hungry fishermen to Northeast Arkansas, were the sport to be adequately publicised. The duck hunters would come too (3). And the oceans of cotton bolls which whiten the landscape for miles around are "atmosphere" and and "color" which the Yankee with his dollars will travel miles out of his way to see, Spice the scene with white pillared manoria ounties and there exists an attraction for al America to be told of. Since all roads here lead to little Rock, the next step is to play up such attractions as the Territorial Capitol (4), authentic remainder from frontier days, preserved almost mi aculously in the very center of bustling commercial sm in the heart of the city. No doubt about it. I

Least likely to succeed—as a tourist area—might be the snap judgment applied to Northeast Arkansas. But the record continues to show that nothing could be farther from the truth. The transformation taking place at Blanchard Springs where an energetic Mounin View Lions Club is changing plain, rural scenery hto "The Land of the Cross-Bow" (1) is one example of the imagination and drive behind the planning in this section. The cabins and other attractions being created at Hardy, close by the Missouri border is attracting folks from as far away as Tennessee to this newest Arkansas resort. Inland deep sea fishing for alligator gar. (2) is awakening the sleepy lower White and St. Francis River delta areas to an awareness of aniattraction which could lure thousands of adven-ture hungry fishermen to Northeast Arkansas, were the sport to be adequately publicised. The duck hunters would come too (3). And the oceans of cotton bolls which whiten the landscape for miles around are "atmosphere" and and "color" which the Yankee with his dollars will travel miles out of his way to see, Spice the scene with white pillared manoria ounties and there exists an attraction for al America to be told of. Since all roads here lead to little Rock, the next step is to play up such attractions as the Territorial Capitol (4), authentic remainder from frontier days, preserved almost mi aculously in the very center of bustling commercial sm in the heart of the city. No doubt about it. I

Least likely to succeed—as a tourist area—might be the snap judgment applied to Northeast Arkansas. But the record continues to show that nothing could be farther from the truth. The transformation taking place at Blanchard Springs where an energetic Mounin View Lions Club is changing plain, rural scenery hto "The Land of the Cross-Bow" (1) is one example of the imagination and drive behind the planning in this section. The cabins and other attractions being created at Hardy, close by the Missouri border is attracting folks from as far away as Tennessee to this newest Arkansas resort. Inland deep sea fishing for alligator gar. (2) is awakening the sleepy lower White and St. Francis River delta areas to an awareness of aniattraction which could lure thousands of adven-ture hungry fishermen to Northeast Arkansas, were the sport to be adequately publicised. The duck hunters would come too (3). And the oceans of cotton bolls which whiten the landscape for miles around are "atmosphere" and and "color" which the Yankee with his dollars will travel miles out of his way to see, Spice the scene with white pillared manoria ounties and there exists an attraction for al America to be told of. Since all roads here lead to little Rock, the next step is to play up such attractions as the Territorial Capitol (4), authentic remainder from frontier days, preserved almost mi aculously in the very center of bustling commercial sm in the heart of the city. No doubt about it. I

Least likely to succeed—as a tourist area—might be the snap judgment applied to Northeast Arkansas. But the record continues to show that nothing could be farther from the truth. The transformation taking place at Blanchard Springs where an energetic Mounin View Lions Club is changing plain, rural scenery hto "The Land of the Cross-Bow" (1) is one example of the imagination and drive behind the planning in this section. The cabins and other attractions being created at Hardy, close by the Missouri border is attracting folks from as far away as Tennessee to this newest Arkansas resort. Inland deep sea fishing for alligator gar. (2) is awakening the sleepy lower White and St. Francis River delta areas to an awareness of aniattraction which could lure thousands of adven-ture hungry fishermen to Northeast Arkansas, were the sport to be adequately publicised. The duck hunters would come too (3). And the oceans of cotton bolls which whiten the landscape for miles around are "atmosphere" and and "color" which the Yankee with his dollars will travel miles out of his way to see, Spice the scene with white pillared manoria ounties and there exists an attraction for al America to be told of. Since all roads here lead to little Rock, the next step is to play up such attractions as the Territorial Capitol (4), authentic remainder from frontier days, preserved almost mi aculously in the very center of bustling commercial sm in the heart of the city. Least likely to succeed—as a tourist area—might be the snap judgment applied to Northeast Arkansas. But the record continues to show that nothing could be farther from the truth. The transformation taking place at Blanchard Springs where an energetic Mounin View Lions Club is changing plain, rural scenery hto "The Land of the Cross-Bow" (1) is one example of the imagination and drive behind the planning in this section. The cabins and other attractions being created at Hardy, close by the Missouri border is attracting folks from as far away as Tennessee to this newest Arkansas resort. Inland deep sea fishing for alligator gar. (2) is awakening the sleepy lower White and St. Francis River delta areas to an awareness of aniattraction which could lure thousands of adven-ture hungry fishermen to Northeast Arkansas, were the sport to be adequately publicised. The duck hunters would come too (3). And the oceans of cotton bolls which whiten the landscape for miles around are "atmosphere" and and "color" which the Yankee with his dollars will travel miles out of his way to see, Spice the scene with white pillared manoria ounties and there exists an attraction for al America to be told of. Since all roads here lead to little Rock, the next step is to play up such attractions as the Territorial Capitol (4), authentic remainder from frontier days, preserved almost mi aculously in the very center of bustling commercial sm in the heart of the city. Least likely to succeed—as a tourist area—might be the snap judgment applied to Northeast Arkansas. But the record continues to show that nothing could be farther from the truth. The transformation taking place at Blanchard Springs where an energetic Mounin View Lions Club is changing plain, rural scenery hto "The Land of the Cross-Bow" (1) is one example of the imagination and drive behind the planning in this section. The cabins and other attractions being created at Hardy, close by the Missouri border is attracting folks from as far away as Tennessee to this newest Arkansas resort. Inland deep sea fishing for alligator gar. (2) is awakening the sleepy lower White and St. Francis River delta areas to an awareness of aniattraction which could lure thousands of adven-ture hungry fishermen to Northeast Arkansas, were the sport to be adequately publicised. The duck hunters would come too (3). And the oceans of cotton bolls which whiten the landscape for miles around are "atmosphere" and and "color" which the Yankee with his dollars will travel miles out of his way to see, Spice the scene with white pillared manoria ounties and there exists an attraction for al America to be told of. Since all roads here lead to little Rock, the next step is to play up such attractions as the Territorial Capitol (4), authentic remainder from frontier days, preserved almost mi aculously in the very center of bustling commercial sm in the heart of the city. No doubt about it. I
